| a line that names it ▥ the hymn’s addressee

Each row is a being, group or place, each column a hymn, as wide as the hymn is long, headed by its numeral, its addressee and its length in lines. A tick marks each line that names the row, by name, epithet, patronymic, ethnic or periphrasis, at its place in the hymn; a box marks the god the hymn is addressed to. The numbers at the right count every mention.

Greek: H. G. Evelyn-White, Hesiod, the Homeric Hymns and Homerica (1914), via the Perseus Digital Library; Hymn 34, Εἰς Ξένους, from T. W. Allen, Homeri Opera V (1912).

Compiled by hand by Peter Danenberg in 2009, from the index of a Loeb edition; read again line by line against the Greek, with a citation for every mention, in 2026.
